

The School of Sorrow.
I sat in the school of sorrow:
The Master was teaching there;
But my eyes were dim with weeping,
And my heart was full of care.
Instead of looking upward,
And seeing his face divine,
So full of the tenderest pity,
For weary hearts like mine.
I only thought of the burden,
The cross before me lay;
So hard, and so heavy to carry,
That it darkened the light of day.
At last in my heavy sorrow,
I looked at the cross above,
And I saw the Master watching
With a glance of tender love.
He turned to the cross before me,
And I thought I heard him say,
"My child, thou must bear thy burden,
And learn thy task to-day."
So I stooped to the weary sorrow:
One look at that face divine,
Had given me power to trust him,
And say, "Thy will, not mine!"

A Troubled Soul.

DEAR DR. FITZGERALD:—I am in trouble, and feel that I must unburden my heart to some one. I turn to you, persuaded that you sympathize with those in distress, and especially with all who are pressed under such burdens as lie upon me. And yet I do not know that you can give me relief; while to pour into your ear my distresses may add to your own, which, I am sure, I would not wantonly increase. But occasionally I have found comfort in the free confessions of a friend. In unbending my heart to a faithful friend I have been truly disburdened, so far at least that the load which had been greatly oppressive became then tolerable.
This is a long preface; and you may be ready to say, why many importunate claims clamor for attention. "Please come to the point." Forgive me, and yet bear with me. This is what I would say in my own way. This is what I would say in my own way. This is what I would say in my own way.

But all this is so general in form that you will scarcely know what I mean. If I can give you some of the particulars which occasion my distress.

The church (congregation) of which I am a member is a large one. It is duly organized and, while not what is called wealthy, has sufficient means to meet all home demands and help no little in general enterprises. But I find that many—I was about to say a majority—seem to have no true interest in the cause of Christ. If there is an entertainment or a society-meeting the same evening the prayer-meeting is held, the preference is given to the former; and when they chance to attend the prayer-meeting there is an air of indifference which chills others and discourages our pastor. If they have in view a visit for recreation or pleasure, those of them who have not abundant means begin early to provide for it; and thus putting off something for the week, when the time comes they have the money to meet the expenses. But if called upon to contribute to the cause of God they say, "I have nothing now; perhaps when the time comes I'll give something if I have any thing." I have had to assist many times in the work of making collections—and work it is—and could have borne disappointment and failure if it had been said, "I am sorry I can't, but I'll give you something when I have been paid, but I'll give you something when I have been paid, but I'll give you something when I have been paid."

It is not a practicable duty to be perfectly holy in this world, then it will follow that the devil has so completely accomplished his design in corrupting mankind that Jesus Christ is at fault, and has no way to sanctify his people but by taking out of the world.

A girl looks prettier in a nice lawn dress than in a dress of a millinery establishment. But, then, nine out of ten girls would rather be the "show window." Let not unworthy things scare the children of God. Parents love their children and do them good, not because they see that they are more worthy than others, but because they are their own.

The preacher who served us not long since was a gentle, courteous, spiritual, faithful man. He was also a man with a clear view of his duty, with strong convictions that he must perform it without partiality, and with the courage to fulfill all that he thought he ought to do. So he went straight forward, and soon found some ancient evils which had been so long connived at that by many they were quickly accepted as prescriptive rights. He was not a harsh word, treated all with due respect, appealed to the Discipline upon him to do what he was doing and to vindicate the course he took. All was of no avail. They opposed him at every stage of his work; some evil of him into every ear that would listen; deprecated his ministry; withdrew their contributions for his support; expressed the hope that there would be a heavy deficiency; as far as possible organized a party in the church, and with a persistence rarely equalled sought by all means to bring him into discredit and have him removed from the pastorate of the church. In this particular case the faction was a minority; and God honored his faithful servant with congregations greatly increased in numbers, with a revival in which more than a hundred were brought into the Church, with such increase in the Sunday-school that the place became too small for it, and with such comfortable maintenance, that the general financial condition of the church was better than admitting that the seal of divine approval had been impressed upon his servant.

I find this also is true: Many will aid in Church-work only when their leadership is recognized; but even respectful dissent from their opinions is not tolerated for a moment. Some keep aloof because not appointed to official position, and others become offended if, having held office, they do not happen to be rechosen as their own successors. I become heart-sick, Doctor, when I see and think of these things, and of many other evils which I may not tax you to hear. To me it seems that when there is full surrender to Christ, petty personal considerations are no longer controlling. The Christian must take any place where he can best serve his Master, and in all things will be moved by high, religious principle, and never by a degrading prejudice.

I fear you will think me very wrong when I profess to see so much that is wrong in others; and I do not feel that I "come far short of my duty." But in all that I have written I believe my aim has been to set down naught in malice, or in any other spirit than an earnest desire to secure peace to Jerusalem and prosperity within her palaces.

But how is a private letter to accomplish much, or for that matter any thing in this direction? My answer is this: I thought, Doctor, if your observations in any considerable measure are were similar to mine, you might write something which would contribute to the correction of the evils and the growth of whatever is lovely and of good report. O would not the Church be a great power for good if only we were all with our Lord would have us to be? I confess to you that the hue which surrounds me seems to be that of the Church at large. But surely this cannot be. It will comfort me to learn that I am mistaken, and that a local distress is indeed local, not extending beyond the narrow limits with which I am most familiar. Pray for me—I pray for us. I do so earnestly desire to see the day when we shall follow peace with all men and holiness; when we shall add to all other graces temperance and brotherly kindness, which the claims of our Lord and Saviour will take precedence of every thing else. Respectfully your friend and sister,

PIERRE HOPE.

Weaned From Earth.

Everything that tends to disenchant the present and to fix our hearts and hopes upon the better world must have an ennobling influence upon the soul. The more attractive heaven becomes to us the more shall we seek in the present to cultivate the heavenly spirits. To be weaned from earth is one of the means of making us seek our spiritual food from heaven; and the trials of earth, transplanting us from place to place and from plan to plan, tend to prepare us for the great transplanting which is to take us from this world altogether and root us in the garden of the Lord above.

Our goodness is not fruit of the love of Christ. Sweetness, gentleness and pity are the qualities with which he endows his disciples. It is imperfect virtue which is sour, severe and implacable. Perfect virtue is meek, affable and compassionate. It thinks of nothing but doing good, "of bearing one another's burdens." There is no acidity in pure Christ-love.

Finish thy work, then sit thee down in some celestial hill;
And of thy strength reviving air
Take thou thy fill.
Finish thy work, then go in peace,
Life's battle fought and won;
Hear from the throne the Master's voice,
"Well done, well done!"
Finish thy work, then take thy harp,
Give praise to God above;
Sing a new song of thankful joy
And confess his love.

Every day a little self-denial. The thing that is difficult to do today will be an easy thing to do to-day and sixty days hence, if each day it shall have been repeated. What power of self-mastery shall he enjoy who, looking to God for grace, seeks every day to practice the grace he prays for.

The man that is too good and spiritual for the visible Church is something of a phenomenon—especially to himself. He finds his worthy associates in the man too holy to pray "forgive us our trespasses," and the one too sanctified to have to keep the Commandments any longer.

Depend upon it, in the midst of all the sciences and arts of the world and all the ignorance of God and His greatness, the man or woman who can say, "Thy will be done," with true heart forgiving us, is nearer the secret of things than the geologist and theologian.

If it is not a practicable duty to be perfectly holy in this world, then it will follow that the devil has so completely accomplished his design in corrupting mankind that Jesus Christ is at fault, and has no way to sanctify his people but by taking out of the world.

A girl looks prettier in a nice lawn dress than in a dress of a millinery establishment. But, then, nine out of ten girls would rather be the "show window." Let not unworthy things scare the children of God. Parents love their children and do them good, not because they see that they are more worthy than others, but because they are their own.

The caress, which are the cream of riches, hang often so heavily at the rich man's girdle, that they clog him with weary days and restless nights, when others sleep quietly.

Many a man thinks it is principle that keeps him from turning rascal, when it is only a full stomach. Be grateful and do not mistake potatoes for principle.

When men are least worthy, most tempted, hardest, unkindest, let us yet command our spirits into His hands. Whether else dare we send them? You cannot make men moral by legislation and you might fill up the state book with such laws and they will be of no avail.

The real things are inside. The real world is the inside world. God is not up, nor down, but in the midst. Be not diverted from your duty by any reflections the silly world may make upon you. That is a noble covetousness—the desire for more work in God's service. It is better to be nobly remembered than nobly born. Our pleasures are in exact proportion to our duties.
